CIVIC SPACE

SITUATION REPORT

West Africa

Governance

In the last few months, the Civicus Monitor Update has reported on the situation in several countries. In the sphere of fear and violence prevails, where state and powerful non-state actors systematically repress the rights of protesters in (Togo, Guinea, Niger and Mali). In the country of Côte d'Ivoire, the Ministry of the Interior has contributed to this situation by arresting protesters on 11 January 2019.

On 11 January 2019, leaders of civil society organizations, political parties, institutions and media representatives gathered in Abidjan to launch a movement to fight corruption in Burkina Faso. The objective of the meeting was to take stock of corruption in Burkina Faso and to present a roadmap for the fight.

Other participants are expected to join the conversation via social media and platforms that they can create. The Civicus Monitor Update has invited audience members to share their experiences with corruption and to create a platform for direct interaction between the Presidential and Vice Presidential candidates of the leading political parties in Nigeria and citizens.

The Movement for Democratic Alternation (MADEM), the Social Renewal Party (PRS), the Democratic Party of Côte d'Ivoire (APDH), the Union for Democracy and Progress (UM), and the Social Renovation Party (PRS) have presented their candidates for the upcoming elections. On the other hand, the former Minister of the Interior, Botché Candé, and one of the PAIGC Verde (PAIGC), the Movement for Democratic Alternation (MADEM), and the Party of Social Renewal (PRS) have presented their candidates for the upcoming elections.

Verdict of the Constitutionality of the Interim Constitution of Côte d'Ivoire

The 2016 elections were marred by attacks on the audience and on independent candidates. The political crisis in the country has reached a stalemate in the country.

The 2009 elections are seen as a victory for the opposition, which has vowed to continue the fight against corruption. The country is seen as a model of democracy and development, with the consolidation of the rule of law, social cohesion, and good governance.

The state both enables and safeguards the enjoyment of civic space for all. Civic space is heavily contested by power holders, incl. Cameroun, Chad & Mauritania.

The state both enables and safeguards the enjoyment of civic space for all. Civic space is heavily contested by power holders, incl. Cameroun, Chad & Mauritania.

Civil societies in West Africa embark on scientific methods and materials to achieve development the consolidation of the rule of law, social cohesion, good governance and democracy.

In addition, there is a project called + Rural Villages with Electricity for the conservation of agricultural products, especially in rural villages.

Minister of Industry, Commerce and Energy declared that the Côte d'Ivoire government will continue to work towards the development of renewable energy. The Minister added that the government will continue to work towards the development of renewable energy.

While individuals and Civil Society Organizations are generally acting, the state is often seen as a barrier to the enjoyment of civic space. These young people were nominated based on their attitude of political society, capacity to contribute to the country's development, and their ability to inspire the youth.

Amadou Gon Coulibaly, President of the Republic, has been called upon by the international community to continue the fight against corruption. The President added that the confidence of the citizenry in our electioneering system is a good sign of a commitment to objectively deal with the issues and regain the confidence of the citizenry.